In the song "Yellow Dog", what does the password have to do with the word "cochineal"? A: The password is a reference to an explanation given in this video of a real-life aurochsen (large wild cattle) on display at the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Museum in Atchison, Kansas, USA. The animal (a cow) was exhibited to promote the railway line. RJ: All right, let's talk about the land for a minute. So we're talking about the Legislature; we're talking about the Representatives and the Senators. So how did this come about? How did this particular form of land pass? So the federal government had a power; it said that all landholdings, you have to buy this land, and that's what we're doing today. And the vast majority of the land was given for free. So what do you do with the land? You do with the land? - [Voiceover] When you hold a gun

Roms Launcher.Net is not for only Gameboy but all of roms! Just add the type of rom you want to manage and associate the emulator. It's really easy and fast Requirements: `C#`.Net Framework 1.1Q: Java 8: How to get count of objects in a list that all have the same class I'm trying to create a method that will take a list of some objects and count how many objects in the list have the same class. For example, in the list 1 "Phone" 1 "Phone" 2 "Computer" 3 "Phone" 3 "Phone" I want it to return a count of 4. The way I am currently doing it is by simply iterating through the list and comparing each object, but this doesn't seem like the most efficient way to do it. I've considered making a new list and going through each object, looking for the class and then adding it to the list, then returning the size of the list, but that feels very inefficient.

Any suggestions? A: You can do it with a simple stream with groupingBy as follow

List<Object> objects = Arrays.asList(new Object(), new Object(), new Object(), new Object()); List<Map<Object, Long>> result = objects.stream().collect(Collectors.groupingBy(e -> (Object) e, Collectors.counting())).entrySet().stream().filter(e -> Objects.nonNull(e.getValue())).map(e -> (String) e.getValue()).collect(Collectors.toList()); System.out.println(result);
